

Parc naturel régional

de

Camargue

- Winter in Camargue and its clouds of anatidae -

Whilst best known for Greater flamingo, the Camargue is also one of Europe's major overwintering grounds for a dozen or so species of anatidae. Come November, clouds of these winter visitors swirl around above the shallow coastal lagoons before choosing a place to rest or feed, with a hundred thousand or more present on some days.

Gaël Hemery

To find out more about the Camargue's birds :

*Visit our web site and discover our recently produced brochure
"Where to watch birds in the Camargue Regional Nature Park"*

www.parc-camargue.fr/where-to-watch-birds-in-the-camargue.html